March 25, 2020

Harland Clarke plays a crucial role in the support and delivery of critical supplies and services for thousands of financial institutions. It also supports healthcare services through the delivery of millions of health savings account cards. These services are considered critical infrastructure services for the U.S., and Harland Clarke is a critical supplier to these essential businesses. Consequently, Harland Clarke will continue to operate under current state of emergency and stay-at-home orders as local conditions and restrictions allow. Our manufacturing facilities and contact centers will continue providing vital payments products and services to you and your customers. Additionally, we are in regular communication with our suppliers who are also critical to the supply chain of these essential services.

Because the safety and well-being of our team members is our top priority as they continue to deliver these critical products and services, many of our employees are working from home. For employees who cannot work from home due to the nature of their jobs, we have implemented all CDC guidance to reduce the risk of the spread of COVID-19, including social distancing and other precautionary measures to ensure the utmost safety of our team members.

We are committed to supporting you, your customers, and the communities you serve through this difficult time with minimal service disruption.
